

MEDICAL RESEARCH SCHOLARS PROGRAM (MRSP)

JOIN US IN DEVELOPING TOMORROW'S LEADERS

Join the Foundation for the National Institutes of Health (FNIH) in supporting the Medical Research Scholars Program (MRSP) this year, and for years to come. Together, the NIH and its partners—corporations, foundations and philanthropists—can ensure that today's most talented Scholars receive the training and experience they need to become tomorrow's research leaders. With your investment, these Scholars will help pave the way for the next medical breakthroughs of our time.

PROFESSIONAL ENRICHMENT

For the current MRSP class, the FNIH is seeking special funding to enable MRSP Scholars to attend the Association of American Physicians (AAP)/American Society for Clinical Investigation (ASCI) meeting on April 20-22, 2018 in Chicago, Illinois. The meeting presents a valuable educational and networking opportunity for the Scholars. The cost of attending is $1,000 per person (all inclusive).

NIH INVESTMENT

In 2016, the NIH contributed more than $2 million to help fund MRSP activities. NIH also provides key resources and infrastructure for the MRSP, including administrative leadership and support, leading scientist mentors, and laboratories and clinics where Scholars conduct research.

We deeply appreciate your commitment to the MRSP. Through your generous investment in the next generation of clinician-scientists, you are ensuring that we have a sufficient pipeline of medical researchers to care for the aging American population and make medical discoveries that improve the health of all.

SUPPORT A STUDENT

Philanthropic support and grants make the critical difference in sustaining the MRSP and ensuring that the program continues to make an impact.

A gift of $75,000 will support one scholar for a full program year, including stipends, health insurance, educational endeavors, relocation and travel fees. The goal is to increase the MRSP class size to 70 Scholars per year.
